Reflections 2010–2011
Recognizing friends and supporters of Emerson Hospital
It has been an historic year for Emerson Hospital as we celebrated our Centennial and reflected back on 100 years of meeting the healthcare needs of our community. What has emerged through our reflections as the dominant theme of the hospital’s history is the enduring bond between the hospital and the community it serves. The bond is evidenced by a tradition of community support, and at each and every turn in the hospital’s history, members of the community offered their resources to advance the mission of the hospital. In turn, these resources enabled the hospital to meet the growing and evolving needs of the communities it serves.

From the founding gift of Charles Emerson to the financial rescue performed by the Emerson Aid Society—now the Emerson Hospital Auxiliary—in 1924; from their support of countless capital campaigns adding new patient areas and medical technology to annual giving in gifts large and small supporting hospital programs and operations, donors have made a critical difference.

This past year was no exception.

Thanks to major support for the Bethke Cancer Center, we were able, with our partners at Massachusetts General Hospital, to modernize the Radiation Oncology Center and install a new linear accelerator. Donors contributed a record $1.07 million to the Emerson Annual Appeal, ensuring that the hospital has the resources it needs to provide the finest patient care available. The work of the Auxiliary and Gift Shop translated into a major financial contribution to renovate Emerson’s “Main Street,” giving the hospital a more welcoming face. And, Centennial Ball attendees capped off Emerson’s 100th year in fashion and fun while making possible the redevelopment of the pediatric center.

The bond between the hospital and community is not an abstraction; it is often embodied by the relationship between Emerson caregivers and their patients. In the pages that follow, we highlight these important connections through four profiles, while we honor and thank the thousands of donors who have once again supported the hospital.

Sincerely,

Christine Schuster

Two days after hip replacement surgery, Rebecca was transferred to Emerson Hospital’s transitional care unit. “I had heard of the unit’s excellent reputation, and it felt really good to be local and in a familiar place,” said Rebecca, whose ties to Emerson run deep. She supervised the outpatient department here in the 1970s and her husband, Dr. Elmer Purcell, is a former president of the medical staff. Dr. Purcell is a retired primary care physician who had a practice in Concord for 35 years. Rebecca is a long-time volunteer in Emerson’s emergency department. “I love working with that staff; it’s such a fast-paced environment, and I decided if I could do anything to make their jobs easier, I would,” she said.

After her injury, Rebecca “wanted the best possible outcome” in terms of her mobility. Her recovery was accelerated both by the exceptional staff in the transitional care unit and by the view from her room of the Sudbury River. “It was so healing for me to see that river,” said Rebecca, who stayed on the unit for two weeks.

“My experience was positive from the get-go, from JoAnn [DiNardo] and Dr. Karen Bougas and the nursing staff to the housekeeper who, as I was being discharged, thanked me for being there,” said Rebecca. “It was really just a lovely moment. I was impressed with the staff around the clock.”

When we are ill or incapacitated in any way, the kindness of others can carry us through the experience. “Emerson’s transitional care unit made for a positive experience when I really needed one,” said Rebecca. And, after she was discharged, her transition home was seamless thanks to home care nurses and in-home physical therapy.

Today, Rebecca is grateful for her optimal functioning. “My mobility is excellent,” she said. “My outcome is exactly as it should be.” For staff dealing with a patient population who may be experiencing immense pain, mobility issues, and concerns about walking again, Rebecca has “nothing but praise for them,” she said. “This was as close to a perfect experience as I could have had.”
With her finger wrapped in ice, Caitlin headed directly to Emerson Hospital’s emergency department (ED), where ED physician Dr. Deborah Gobetz assured them that she could repair the finger. “Dr. Gobetz talked to Caitlin the whole time and kept her calm,” said Kristin.

Caitlin had suffered what’s known as a crush injury, which occurs when a body part is subjected to a high degree of force or pressure, usually after being squeezed between two heavy objects. “Those are nasty injuries, and we see a lot of them,” said Dr. Gobetz. “When they occur to the index fingers or thumb, they really hurt, and they are more debilitating functionally.”

In Caitlin’s case, the distal finger was fractured and the nail was damaged. “They can bleed a lot under the nail, so we remove the nail and repair the nail bed,” said Dr. Gobetz. To numb the finger, Dr. Gobetz used a digital block—a nerve block at the base of the finger. “The fingertip has great healing capacity,” said Dr. Gobetz. “The whole digit was there, and we know that the nail will grow back in. We use absorbable sutures to pull the nail bed together—that’s where the wound was.”

With help from Emerson’s pediatric intervention team and the use of a stress ball, Caitlin felt reassured. “They’re a great resource,” said Dr. Gobetz. “Distraction is helpful; for most kids, it’s fear of the unknown that makes any procedure difficult.”

When Kristin initially saw Caitlin’s injury, she thought it might require plastic surgery afterward, but “Dr. Gobetz did an amazing job,” she said. “It healed really well. There was no nerve damage.” It is praise that Caitlin echoes. “Dr. Gobetz was really nice and very comforting,” she said. “She told me it wasn’t as big a deal as I thought. But she said it was going to hurt; she didn’t sugarcoat it.”

Caitlin’s finger took three months to heal fully and her nail grew back slowly, but today, a small scar from the stitches is all that remains of the painful ordeal and she is back to pursuing her passion, piano.
Since 1938, when Bill Kingman was first a patient at Emerson Hospital, both he and his wife, Nancy, have felt that Emerson is “the place to go.” “This is my hospital, and it was my parents’ hospital,” he said.

So, when Bill and Nancy required knee surgery, they knew just where to turn. Over the course of three years, they each had both knees replaced by orthopedic surgeon Dr. Jack McInnis, who—along with the practice, Orthopedic Affiliates—came highly recommended by the Kingmans’ friends. “We were struck by his ease, how he sat back in his chair and chatted with us instead of rushing us through the visit,” said Nancy.

When Nancy first told friends that she needed knee surgery, their first question was where she would have it done. “Emerson, of course,” was her reply. “Why go to Boston when you can have it done right here.”

The Kingmans have had a close association with Emerson for many years. Their second child was born here after Bill finished his military service. Bill was a Board member in the 1960s and also served as a Corporator.

Nancy has been a member of the Auxiliary since 1961 and served as that group’s president from 2005–2007. And, through all these years, they have watched proudly as the hospital evolved. “We are constantly pleased as Emerson has grown and added specialists and incorporated the whole continuum of care that a hospital should provide,” said Bill.

For Nancy, it’s the personal touch at Emerson that makes her feel safe and comfortable. “The grandfather clock that stands in the hospital entrance is a nice touch, it means home,” she said. “We’ve always found the care at Emerson to be very thoughtful.”

And today, both are “more than pleased” with the results of their knee operations. With increased mobility, “I can do almost anything I want,” Bill said. “We’ve been very lucky.”
In 2010, Dottie, who considers herself “a healthy person,” began experiencing chest pains while exercising. A physician assistant wisely determined that these pains were likely not related to indigestion and, concerned that the pains worsened while exercising, suggested that Dottie undergo a stress test. Two minutes into the stress test, the physician conducting it knew “we had a problem,” said Dottie.

After quadruple bypass surgery at Massachusetts General Hospital in June 2010 by a “wonderful team of all-female doctors,” Dottie returned to Emerson and the capable care of Dr. Steven Herson and the cardiac rehabilitation team. She chose the route of cardiac rehabilitation because she “wanted to get her life back as quickly as possible,” she said.

In the cardiac rehabilitation team, Dottie found support and knowledge as she navigated her health crisis. “For many people, this is the most traumatic thing that has happened in their lives,” she said. “Not knowing what you can and cannot do and how it will affect your health can be very unnerving. Cardiac rehab provides a heavily monitored and very safe environment in which to reclaim your life. They help you understand that this is a controllable, not a curable, disease.”

As part of managing the disease, cardiac rehab patients are given the tools to make life changes. Through nutrition counseling, monitored exercise, and discussion topics including stress, medication, and anatomy and physiology, Dottie, a self-described “foodie,” learned “how much I didn’t know,” she said. “Today I spend a lot more time reading labels.”

Dottie and her husband, Jack, a Corporator at Emerson Hospital, have had “good luck in every instance” while at Emerson (both of their children were born here). “Emerson is a really important resource in the community,” she said.
Anna and Neil Rasmussen know a bit about history. They live in two 18th century taverns, lovingly and authentically restored. Their home is built on land that was originally owned by the Emerson family and it is the first property in Massachusetts to become permanently preserved for conservation. They founded the Save Our Heritage organization, whose mission is to protect the birthplace of the American Revolution, the cradle of the environmental movement and the home of the American literary renaissance.

So it is fitting that, in keeping with these historical interests, they also have long established ties to another important historical institution now in its 100th year, Emerson Hospital.

Both Anna and Neil's mothers were cared for at Emerson. Their children—Autumn and Anders—were both born at the hospital. Anna has served as a Corporator since 1996 and the couple has been generous and steadfast in their support of Emerson for many years.

In 2008, they pledged $250,000 in support of the hospital's anticoagulation clinic. In recognition of this major gift, the hospital established the Betty Winter Anticoagulation Management Center located at the hospital's Center for Specialty Care in Concord. The Center was named for Anna's mother, who received care from the clinic for nearly 30 years.

"My mother had a nearly fatal stroke many years earlier," explained Anna. "Thanks to the excellent, compassionate care she received at the hospital, she had another 30 years of quality life. She trusted the staff implicitly."

Neil's mother, Thalia, who passed away in 1999 from pancreatic cancer, also benefited from the compassionate and quality care that she received at the Bethke Cancer Center. "We appreciated having state-of-the-art radiation therapy from Mass General that is so conveniently available at Emerson," said Neil.

"Having grown up in the community (both Anna and Neil are originally from Sudbury), we appreciate how fortunate we are to have a hospital like Emerson so close by," said Anna. "When I drive by the hospital at night and see the Emerson sign up there, it is a reassuring feeling. In donating to Emerson, there is so much that we receive in return," she said.

"We recognize the importance of being good stewards of all the wonderful institutions and resources in our community, including Emerson. We want to ensure that these resources are passed on to future generations and that Emerson stays healthy for many years to come."

Dr. Paul Re (second from right) gave a presentation on youth sports injuries at a recent house party in Concord. Guests Dawn Schnell (left) and John Hunt (right) enjoyed this informational event. Kevin Kelly (second from left) and his wife, Corporator Nicole Kelly (not pictured) hosted this event for Emerson Hospital.
The Friedman family of Concord enjoyed the Verrill Farm Harvest Festival in October. Area families enjoyed pumpkin picking, hay and pony rides, treasure hunts and face painting. The event raised more than $12,000 that will provide "coping kits" for pediatric patients through our Pediatric Intervention Team.
